ID) COMPREHENSION ECRITE

>> LE TEXTE:

The Bush administration recently announced support for separate public schools for boys and girls. The decision represents a major change in American educational policy. For thirty years, the government has generally disapproved of these single-sex public schools. It has done so because of a 1972 law called Title Nine. This law bans unequal treatment based on sex.

Under Title Nine, single-sex schools face possible legal action. In January, however, Congress passed an Administration measure that provides 3 million dollars for single-sex schools. Congress also told the Education Department to change the way it administers Title Nine.

Education Department officials say they will reconsider the law. The goal will be to give local officials more choice in operating their schools without violating the law. More single-sex schools may be able to receive federal money as long as both boys and girls have equal chances to learn. However, some legal experts say these schools would still violate the law. They say the new policy will be tested in the courts.

IV) GRAMMAIRE

> Le futur

Education Department officials say they will reconsider the law. The goal will be to give local officials more choice in operating their schools without violating the law.

On utilise ici le modal WILL qui indique ce qu'on appelle en français le futur. Ce "temps" est très simple en anglais.

>> Syntaxe: S + WILL + base verbale

Will you help me?

Yes, I will. / No, I won't.

I will help / You will help / He will help / We will help / You will help / They will help.

>> Emplois:

- prévisions (John won't win the race; the weather will be very bad tomorrow.)
- événements planifiés (the show will start at 10 tonight).
- promesses: I will help you to do your homework tonight.

Dans les exemples ci-dessus, on retrouve ces 3 emplois principaux: une promesse du Ministère de l'Education Nationale américain de faire quelque chose bientôt.

VI) TRADUCTION DES DOCUMENTS-SUPPORTS

> Ecrit

Le gouvernement Bush a récemment annoncé qu'il soutenait le fait d'avoir des écoles publiques pour garçons séparées de celles pour filles. Cette décision représente un changement majeur dans la politique éducative américaine. Pendant 30 ans, le gouvernement a généralement été en désaccord avec ces écoles non mixtes. Il a fait cela à cause d'une loi de 1972 appelée "Title Nine". Cette loi bannit les traitements inégaux reposant sur le sexe.

Selon "Title Nine", les écoles non mixtes peuvent se heurter à de possibles actions judiciaires. En janvier, néanmoins, le Congrès a fait passer une mesure qui donne 3 millions de dollars aux écoles non mixtes. Le Congrès a aussi dit au Ministère de l'Education de changer sa façon d'appliquer "Title Nine".

Les fonctionnaires du Ministère de l'Education disent qu'ils vont reconsidérer la loi. Le but sera de donner aux responsables locaux plus de choix pour diriger leurs écoles sans violer la loi. Plus d'écoles non mixtes pourront peut-être recevoir de l'argent du gouvernement tant que les garçons et les filles ont des chances égales d'apprendre. Néanmoins, certains experts judiciaires disent que ces écoles violeraient toujours la loi. Ils disent que cette nouvelle mesure politique sera mise à l'épreuve dans les tribunaux.

> Oral

Certains éducateurs pensent que les enfants peuvent apprendre mieux dans des écoles non mixtes. D'autres disent que les enfants ont besoin d'être avec des enfants du sexe opposé. Des scientifiques ont montré que les garçons et les filles apprennent les choses différemment. Néanmoins, les recherches sur les effets des écoles non mixtes ont donné des résultats mitigés. La plupart des travaux de recherche ont porté sur les filles.

Pendant les années 90, une association (The American Association of University Women) a réalisé des études majeures dans le domaine de l'éducation. L'organisation a montré que les filles qui vont à l'école avec des garçons ne font peut-être pas aussi bien que les garçons. Elle a montré que les professeurs et les écoles ne traitent pas les filles en respectant l'égalité. Mais elle a aussi montré que l'éducation non mixte ne semble pas généralement aider les filles.

La plus ancienne école non mixte des Etats-Unis a remporté un grand succès. Western High School à Baltimore (Maryland) a été créée en 1844. Plus d'un millier de filles de plusieurs races, groupes ethniques et religions suivent les cours de Western. Presque toutes les filles continuent jusqu'à l'université.
